For one in seven of all adults, a disability or disability-like condition makes them live with a changed life situation. We focused on one of these conditions, persistent low back pain (LBP). This study examines factors and times associated with the conversion from LBP to an adult disability and examines how age modifies this association. Longitudinal data on LBP and new adult disabilities of 886 people in a random sample of the Dutch population aged 16-50 years were analyzed. Logistic regression analyses were applied for the assessment of the association of time-varying and stable (at baseline) factors with the conversion of LBP to adult disability. The age group 18-30 years showed a lower risk of developing a disability compared to the older age groups. This association was not present for the risk of conversion in people with LBP. Gender was only a significant predictor of the conversion in adults aged 31-50 years. Low sociodemographic status, unemployment and the presence of obesity (body mass index ≥ 30) increased the risk of disability. People with obesity at baseline had a higher risk of disability compared to people with a healthy weight. However, their obesity was only related to the conversion at a later life stage in people without LBP. In conclusion, people aged 31-50 years with a high BMI are at risk of developing an adult disability. However, the disability with which they suffer is only present in adults with LBP at baseline. Prevention and treatment of obesity should be integrated in all care for LBP.Q: Linker command failed with exit code 1 (use -v to see invocation) when using ffmpeg I am trying to use ffmpeg to encode a video and this is the output I get on running the command: /Users/xxxx/googlestuff/mypowterapp/bin/xcodebuild -scheme mypowterapp f678ea9f9e
